

Fifth Grade News!

Recently, our fifth grade class enjoyed a trip to North Adams, Massachusetts to the Mass MoCA museum. The exhibit we went to see was called "You Art What You Eat." We all had a great time and we were able to make our own artwork using food and other materials!

Lateona Griffin: "I liked their artwork. It's amazing how they made a face out of phonebooks. The candy meteor was beautiful and I liked how they made a building out of Oreos. The Jell-O building was fun to touch and it was cool how they make it with the Jell-O mold; it was soft and wiggly. The Jell-O movies were also funny when the buildings were falling down because of the rain. The most fun part was when we got to build things. I built a small bed out of cork and marshmallows. I think the little pink robot that Miss Jackie made was funny, so was Mr. Mark's football field."

NyJawaun Thomas: "When we were at the meteor, it looked liked the candies were trying to get away from the sun - the colors were really cool! I liked when we got to make our own art pieces and take them home to show people what we did at the museum. The Jell-O White Houses were funny because some were sticky and hard. The title, "You Art What You Eat," was funny because she [Casey] was saying that you can make art out of food and maybe eat it. I really liked the painting with the skeleton with the food labels around it making them look like different fruits. I also liked the upside down trees they had outside and the hanging candy wrappers on a string. The underwater display on the windowsill looked cool; Charles and I thought it looked like SpongeBob."
