

How to Become a Good Writer

I truly like writing creative fables often. It comes natural to me, but not for others. All students at certain times hate to write. Sometimes I lose my organization skills, even though writing is a big deal. It's hard sometimes but I still enjoy writing.

To begin to become a good writer you will have to start with a piece of paper and a sharp pencil. To really get started you will have to choose what font you're going to use. Now you will have to practice what you are going to do to make it look neat, like choosing a font to see which one is in your best interest. Also, don't forget to make your title. Okay now it's time to get to the other things.

To continue you will have to come up with an idea. Next, you will start your rough draft. Then you will go over it with a peer and find all your errors and try to fix them. Also you will talk with a teacher to find other errors. Other things that you may find are spelling, punctuation, and grammar. Then later you can get started on your final copy.

Finally, we are at the end. You will do a final copy with correct writing answers. It starts out with an introduction, body, and conclusion. Conclusion is something you're telling the reader. Introduction is explaining what you're doing. Body is the middle thing talking about what you're doing.

Well, those are the wonderful steps that are going to lead you in writing. Now let's go and make a story.
